- On the evening of 5 October, YEH Chien-ying¹ and HUANG Yung-sheng, commander of the 15 Army Group², left Canton by rail for Hankow, for a conference, accompanied by 36 guards. This conference was with LIN Piao and was called by LIN. LIN had arrived from Peiping early in October and was scheduled to return to Peiping immediately after the conference.
- On 15 August LIN Piao issued a secret directive to military district commanders, and to Party committee members of all levels, of the Central and South China region, giving the aims and lines of action of the democratic reform movement. According to the directive the movement is to be launched in factories, mines, and residential localities to eliminate reactionary influences, and that to improve management and democratize supervision it is necessary to rely on the laboring class to purge reactionaries. Reform is to be carried out in three stages: by exposing reactionaries in factories and other organizations, by exposing internal problems and self-criticism, and by reorganizing unions, and youth associations.
- In early September reactionaries in labor unions were being weeded out by LIN Ch'iang (林鋈), chairman of the Kwangtung Labor Union, and LIAO Ssu-kuang (廖似光),³ chairman of the Canton Labor Union.
- In early September Kwangtung authorities appointed K'OU Ch'ing-yen (寇慶延) as deputy chief of the Kwangtung Public Security Bureau. K'OU is a native of Meihsien, Kwangtung, and is 47 years old. In 1929 he became special Chinese Communist Commissioner for the Meihsien-Chaochou area. In 1930 he joined the Chinese Communist forces in Kiangsi. He was formerly the deputy head of the Hunan Public Security Bureau in which position he was responsible for the execution of large numbers of counter-revolutionaries in Hunan.
